It was very clever, including the Marvel Ultimate Alliance references, that served to drive home the themes it was attempting to convey. I'm not entirely sure it sells the idea, but at least it could be used for completely different purposes. I was thinking the same thing. However, it all depends on how much Sony wants to sell this console. The Playstation 4 itself has sold way more units than the Xbox One. However, the other PS4 games haven't even come close to Sony's Halo or Uncharted numbers. It's likely that they want to sell this theme to the consumers who want to emulate more Star Wars games and play more of the old Star Wars games. But it's too late if that's the case. If they wait until 2015 to create the theme, the PlayStation 5 will probably be out by then and they won't have any theme to promote. And without a Star Wars theme, you're unlikely to get people to buy it. It just doesn't seem like a good marketing strategy to me. The Playstation 4 is doing quite well and this theme would only hinder sales. Despite the positive reviews, they might not be selling what they intended to sell. So I think it's silly to include it at this point. This will certainly be the case with the PS4Pro, which is set to launch in the summer. I agree with them not including this. This game is going to show up in the movie section and will undoubtedly dominate sales. I'm not even a Star Wars fan and this game has many good features. I agree with them not including this.
